TALE OF A FORTUNE WASTED.

MORELOS TELLS HOW HE SPENT $337,000 IN THREE YEARS.

Money Made to Fly by a Mexican Prodigal—Part Gone in Dissipation, Part in Gambling, Part in Business Ventures—He Is a Day Laborer Now.

PASADENA, Cal., July 24.—A modern prodigal has been doing the huskiest kind of manual labor in Pomona Valley during the last half year. For a few months he was a day laborer, digging trenches for sewers in the streets of this city, and now he is in a section gang of railroad trackmen.

He is Manuel Guzman Morelos, a member of a prominent family of Monterey, Mexico. When he was left an orphan in 1898 he had $337,000 to his credit in a bank in Monterey. He was then 22. To-day, at the age of 28, he has not one cent left of his fortune.

He has not even a bit of the wealth of family silver, not a souvenir of the fine old Morelos mansion, not a stray garment from his former wardrobe of more than 700 pieces. Not so much as a single article of jewelry out of the great rosewood jewel casket that he inherited remains in his possession. Everything has gone.

Most of his property took wings in New York and European capitals. Too proud to let his relatives and friends in Mexico know how thoroughly his patrimony had been dissipated, he came to southern California and sought his livelihood by the first work that he could get. Here among strangers he has been contentedly working with pickaxe and shovel at $1.50 a day, and he says he has really enjoyed life more since he earned his own livelihood than ever before.

"Oh, I've got over brooding over my a lot of table scraps for use in all parts of the world. I saw millions in it. I soon found that my money was the only capital part in it.

"For nine months a lot of scheming Spaniards lived on my monthly outlays of cash for conducting the concern. At last we had on hand a dozen different peppery sauces and condiments in quantities enough to float a ship. Meanwhile we incurred a debt of some $35,000 for advertising in hundreds of publications in Europe. When I had spent $20,000 altogether in table scraps I quit, and going to health never went back to see the property or to face angry creditors.

"Once more in Italy, I abandoned business ideas as altogether too expensive for me. I preferred to have something for my money. I hunted up my former delightful but costly companions.

"More months of joy and more thousands to my borrowing friends for expenses followed. We went in a steam yacht over to Alexandria, to Tunis and Tripoli and went up the Nile until we grew weary of the monotony.

"I tried of European hearing that there were opportunities for me to make money and live well at the same time in Havana, I sailed for Cuba. There I invested $27,000 in a tobacco plantation, only to find after I had made a beautiful success out of a wilderness that the title was imperfect. Then I was mad. I had no further use for business and went back to Paris in the winter of 1902.

"Next I landed in London, where I kept on deposit the little remnant of my father's money. I half-heartedly tried to get employment as translator of Spanish into English, meanwhile living at the Hotel Metropole.

"More of my old friends came about me and a gay life took every dollar I had left. I spent the last cent of my fortune on a dinner with a friend.

"For weeks after that I lived on money raised at pawnbrokers'. I sacrificed all my personal effects bit by bit. The last was my father's diamond-studded watch. Then I borrowed money for a while, for I had leached the art from lending to my companions times without number.

"I got work in an olive importing house in London where my Spanish and Italian helped me, but the rates were too exacting and I was discharged. Then I got work on
